UM STUDENTS PUBLISH
LITERARY MAGAZINE

MISSOULA--

The first edition of "CutBank," a literary magazine in paperback form, has been published by the Associated Students of the University of Montana (ASUM) and is available in Missoula area bookstores.

The 120-page book is a collection of poems, short stories, reviews, photographs and drawings.

David Long, managing editor of the magazine from Missoula, said "CutBank" is funded by ASUM and replaces the "Garrett," an earlier publication that has since been discontinued.

"The text is a combination of works by UM graduate and undergraduate students, and contributions solicited from established authors around the country," Long said.

"We hope eventually to have widespread national distribution due to the caliber of the authors and the type of works included," he added.

Staff members include Long, a graduate student in the UM Creative Writing program, and William Kittredge, assistant professor of English and widely-published fiction author who serves as editor. An eight-member editorial board screens the submitted material.

The new magazine, published twice yearly in the spring and fall, is available at the ASUM Bookstore, Freddy's Feed and Read, Garden City News, Missoula Mercantile and through the UM English department. The cost is $1.50 per issue or $3 per year subscription.
